Brexit conference

As we start 2018, the Brexit negotiation process enters a critical and final phase. Northern Ireland and the Irish border are now central to the final negotiation. The Irish border issue is to be settled before the European Council meeting on 21-22 March 2018.

agendaNi is putting together a high-profile event that will look at the out workings of the deal on the Irish border and on the practical implications for Northern Ireland. The first session of the conference will look at the bigger strategic issues facing all sectors of the Northern Ireland economy. Confirmed speakers to date include a senior representative from the Department for the Economy, Janan Ganesh, Financial Times Commentator, Billy Melo Araujo, former WTO lawyer and Allie Rension, Head of Europe and Trade Policy, IoD London.

In addition to looking at the issues of trade and the Irish border there will be a number of sectoral speakers that will look at the detailed impact of Brexit on key sectors in the Northern Ireland economy, including Richard Murphy, Pinsent Masons on energy and Declan Billington, Thompsons on agri-food.

The conference will take an interactive approach with plenty of time set aside for discussion. With the mix of high-profile visiting experts and local sectoral speakers, delegates will get an insight into how Brexit will unfold and what will be the practical impact for Northern Ireland business leaders and policy makers.

Conference speakers

Declan Billington has recently taken up the position of Chair at the Northern Ireland Food and Drink Association and is also CEO of leading animal feed manufacturer, Thompsons. He is a member of the Agri-Food Strategy Board and also represents Northern Ireland on the board of the leading UK based agricultural lobbying body, the Agricultural Industries Confederation. Declan has previously held a number of prominent industry positions including Chair of CBI Northern Ireland, Chair of the Economic Development Forum's Skills sub group, and Chair of the Northern Ireland Grain Trade Association.

David Carson David Carson is a corporate finance partner, leading Public Policy including Brexit in Deloitte Ireland. David is a member of the IIEA Brexit Hub. He is a Council member of the British Irish Chamber of Commerce and is a member of the Brexit subcommittee. He led a team that conducted a sectoral review on behalf of a Government Department of the impact of Brexit on Irish companies. He has advised a number of companies on the impact of Brexit. David leads the Deloitte "Brexit Lab" for clients to assist them in their strategies to mitigate threats and take advantage of opportunities arising from Brexit. The lab accelerates businesses beyond uncertainty by examining potential risks, scenario planning and exploring opportunities to drive strategy and decision making.

Donna Hemphill is a Senior Manager in the tax team at Deloitte Ireland providing customs and excise advisory services. Donna has 20 years' experience, with roles in industry and logistics. Her industry experience includes leading customs compliance department for a global manufacturer. She has practical knowledge of AEO, customs warehousing and other regimes and developed an internal controls program within the business. She has an excellent working knowledge of import/export customs declarations and supply chain optimisation. Donna is currently working with businesses to analyse the impacts of Brexit on their supply chain and offering solutions such as customs regimes, AEO accreditation and supply chain review.

Billy Melo-Araujo is a lecturer at the School of Law of the Queen's University Belfast where he teaches and researches on EU and International Trade Law. Prior to entering academia he worked as a solicitor in Brussels advising clients on corporate law and EU law and as a legal officer at the WTO Appellate Body. His research focuses mainly on EU External Trade relations Law and WTO law. His most recent research and publications focus on the role of devolved administrations in shaping post-Brexit UK trade policy.

Richard Murphy is a Partner at Pinsent Masons and specialises in energy projects. His energy expertise and experience includes advising clients on a range of regulatory, advisory and transactional matters. Richard is rated as a leading individual for energy work in both Chambers UK and the Legal 500.

Allie Rension is Head of Europe & Trade Policy for the Institute of Directors, London. Her role includes devising recommendations and representing the voice of members on EU reform matters and helping to provide the link between business and Government on increasing international trade. She also routinely provides advocacy for the IoD on a range of regulatory issues in Brussels. She was previously Research Director at Business for Britain, the campaign focused on renegotiating the UK's relationship with the EU.

Just a few of many issues which have been raised include:

- Outlook for cross-border trade post Brexit
- What will happen to companies in the pharma, aerospace and manufacturing sectors?
- What will Brexit mean for inward investment, a key pillar of economic strategy?
- What will be the impact on the voluntary and community sector?
- How will supply chains be impacted by any new arrangements?
- Impact on other sectors: health care, transport and third level education
